

THE BALTIMORE WEEKEND WAS A REAL FOUR STAR PRODUCTION

AVALON, BROAD ARROW, CHANTEY, LAST RESORT, RHYTHM, SCUDDER, and WHIPPERSNAPPER all tied up to the dock of the Inner Harbor East Marina on Friday, Sept. 15. Doc Johnson was accompanied by his son for the sail up from Solomons. The trip up to the Marina was a slog of wind on the nose, rain, and poor visibility. Janet and Bruce George on BRISTOL CREAM III only made it as far as Thomas Point Light and had to return home with a propulsion system problem. They telephoned BROAD ARROW to report that they were heading back to home port, but that they would drive up to Baltimore by auto for the Saturday evening get-together.

After all boats were in, everyone met under the tent for cocktails and then headed out for dinner at the James Joyce Irish Restaurant.

They awakened Saturday morning to light rain and haze, but not to be deterred, they grabbed light jackets and umbrellas and they headed off to explore the city venturing off by foot or water taxi to the aquarium, Fort McKinley, the Oyster Festival or the American Visionary Museum. When they returned in the afternoon they found that a total of nine boats of the Magothy River Sailing Association boats had joined the group. Both clubs gathered for an early social hour before heading out for a great night on the town. It was fun meeting the friendly Magothy people for the first time and they certainly brought a wonderful assortment of goodies to enjoy during the cocktail hour. Burry and Wendy Vanderveer of the Magothy Club had organized a wonderful evening for those who didn't have other plans. They had made reservations and even printed up maps to guide folks to the Comedy Club. Twenty-one of the combined group took off for a real new adventure. After the entertainment, where the young entertainers made sport of the "old Fogies" in their midst, they walked or taxied to Vaccaros for one of the famous ice cream and pastry desserts. They were colossal and most were covered with huge mounds of whipped cream. Now we know why people consider this sweet shop one of the high lights of Baltimore.

On Sunday morning quite a few folks came by car to join everyone for brunch. The weather was glorious, bright and sunny, and the foods that appeared on the table were really sumptuous. The Georges arrived by auto, after their engine problems had sent them back home. The Kennards arrived and Carol Johnson produced a welcome wheelchair to make it easier for Hunter to reach the party... miles out on the dock. Will and Logan Hottle came by car too. They have been working on their house, and trying to get ready for the cruise. Deb and Ken Coons drove in too. Ken has had a very debilitating bout of shingles which has sort of cut their sailing short this fall. We are happy to report that he is mending, albeit slowly. George and Clary Thomas were there too.. and both of them are speaking about selling L.B. QUEEQUEG. We shall miss that lovely blue boat.

We all started off the morning with Mimosas and then ate more than our fill of great food. Marge and Paul Kavanaugh were marvelous host and hostess for a great Baltimore weekend, not to mention chilling the champagne, and griddleing those beautiful pancakes. Thanks are in order too to Tom and Joel who produced their usual sausage-apple-onion goodie in a great chafing dish cooker for everyone.

Marge and Paul couldn't have arranged that, but the weather was gorgeous, and the boats pulled out one by one for the trip home under a brilliant blue sky. That made up for the drizzle at the start of the weekend, but a little rain and wind never stopped the CBC from having a great time.
